

Putting Inclusion at the Heart of Workforce Planning

- ▶ Clare Baguley, Psychological Professions Workforce Lead, Clinical Advisory Team, Health Education England Working across the North West– 09.30–09.45

- IAPT leading workforce development in the Psychological Professions
- Diversity & widening access is still a big challenge
 - Individual patients & community engagement ?
 - Practitioners & Therapists – a workforce that reflect the communities that they work within?
- Large scale cultural change takes time and persistence
- Unique opportunity service users / clinicians / managers / commissioners
- A call to action – how do we work together to make a difference?

<http://www.ppn.nhs.uk/>

@NWPPN

A journey for Psychological Professions

Together, we can have a stronger voice
Together, we can co-create our future

Please register and login to your online conversation, now.
We'll explore this later today

PPsIntoAction.org

- Shared vision for our collective potential
- Understand the actions that PPs need to take
- Understand the barriers that PPs face and the support we need

About the online workshop

- ▶ Our online workshop is similar to a physical workshop but it's more flexible and inclusive, which is really important for the #PPsIntoAction project as we seek to engage with people across professional and service user groups, nationwide:
- ▶ The online workshop is anonymous – your name is not attached to anything you share;
- ▶ You can join the online workshop from a PC, tablet or smart phone;
- ▶ All psychological professionals, those working in adjacent professions, and service users are welcome to join the conversation to have their voice heard;
- ▶ You can visit the workshop as many times as you like, 24 hours a day, 7 days a week;
- ▶ Everything you say in the workshop is anonymous;
- ▶ Everyone can read, rate and comment upon the ideas of others – your name is not attached to anything.

Share with your crowd right now

#PPsIntoAction

PPsIntoAction.org

facebook.com/PPsIntoAction.org